

NAN PATTERSON DECIDES NOT TO PUT IN A DEFENSE

After a Sensational Ending Prosecution Rests Its Case, and the Defense Decides Not to Call Even the Actress in Her Own Behalf.

SISTER REJECTS LIBERTY TO SAVE ACTRESS' LIFE

Rand Promises to Dismiss Conspiracy Indictment If She Will Answer Questions, but She Declares She Will Stand by Relative and Refuses.

The Prosecution dealt a staggering blow to Nan Patterson this afternoon when Mr. Rand got in evidence pawn tickets showing that on June 3, 1904, jewelry of Mrs. J. Morgan Smith had been pawned by her husband in Hyman Stern's pawnshop—the same day the revolver with which Young was slain was bought.

Mr. Rand also read to the jury the testimony of Nan Patterson at her last trial, which, by her sister's testimony to-day, must be false.

The Prosecution closed its case at 3.02 P. M.

A motion to dismiss the indictment against the actress was overruled, and then a recess for an hour was taken for Nan Patterson's lawyers to determine whether or not they would put in a defense.

Mr. Levy agreed to testify Mr. Rand by 10 o'clock whether or not he would put in any defense on Monday.

After a conference with his client, her father and his associate attorneys, Lawyer Abe Levy announced that no defense would be put in, but that the defendant was ready to submit her case to the jury.

The most sensational and dramatic scene in the Nan Patterson trial had previously occurred, when Mrs. J. Morgan Smith, with a ring of defiance in her voice, declared that she would remain loyal to her sister and rejected Mr. Rand's offer to have the conspiracy indictment against her dismissed at once if she would become his witness and freely answer his questions.

After this fresh sensation came in quick succession. Mr. Rand introduced the letters seized in the Smith trunk in Cincinnati, and declared they proved that the Smiths were concerned in the purchase from Pawnbroker Stern of the revolver with which Caesar Young was slain.

The Recorder refused to admit them as evidence.

"Mrs. Smith," said Mr. Rand, "If I promise to take you into Part I. of General Sessions and have the indictment now pending against you dis-
